NOT ONE LIFE LOST NOR POUND OF MAIL

CREDITABLE RECORD OF CANADIAN AIR MAIL SERVICES IS REVIEWED

OTTAWA—Surveying the recent history of aviation in Canada an official Government report is able to make a satisfactory statement that in three years' flying mail services in the midst of great expansion, not a life has been lost nor a pound of mail destroyed. In this time total mail carried went from 14,684 pounds to 430,636 for twelve months.

Three-fourths of the area of the Dominion, and pointed out, still is unserved by roads and railways, and so there is great need for aerial development. Explorers, prospectors and scientists freely use the airplane for access to hitherto inaccessible regions. Millions of acres of remote country are being prepared and the bank areas streaked with rivers and dotted with lakes. Aerodromes are being fitted up everywhere and the new mail routes organized.

The report finds that accidents are unacceptably frequent and declares that this is the only disquieting factor in the situation. Government services show a fine record in this respect, and so it is emphasized that most accidents can be avoided by unceasing vigilance, proper training and inspection, and good flying discipline.

Reviewing 29 accidents which occurred in a year with 31 killed and 25 injured, it is found that only one was on a scheduled air route, and it involved no fatalities. Eleven occurred in the light aeroplane class, four in the medium class, and ten were caused by pilot's errors of judgment, or by low level aerobatics. Analyzing the complete list it is found that not more than three were the result of engine failure; by all the others greater care and more caution on the part of pilots would have averted the catastrophes.

A very few figures will serve to indicate the general progress of aviation in the Dominion. In three years the total aircraft mileage for twelve months of the Federal Government, 6,254,079, the number of passengers carried from 18,932 to 124,763, and the number of personnel miles from 2,253,041 to 12,399,076.

CONKLIN REUNITED WITH SOUP-STRAINER

Chester Conklin and his mustache are reconciled.

After a separation that endured through his last screen role, the character comedian and his mustache will be seen together for the duration of Conklin's participation in the action of "The Virginian" which comes to the Theatre for a 3 day run on Monday next.

He plays the role of Uncle Hughey in the picture an adaptation from the novel by Owen Wister. It was during the screening of "Zane Grey's 'Stairs of Sand'" that Conklin laid his mustache on the shelf.

In "The Virginian" Conklin helps in the support of a cast which has Gary Cooper in the title role and Walter Huston in the role of Tompkins, the villain. Mary Brian as Molly Wood, is the school-teacher with whom Cooper falls in love.

BIG FINANCIAL PICTURE THIS WEEK

STORY OF PLAY OF VIVID INTEREST TO PATRONS OF ELITE

Roller McCray who has risen from a humble worker in the steel mills to a powerful factor on Wall Street is riding on the crest of his success and crushing all the weaker financiers. Among his victims is Walter Tabor whose beautiful wife has snubbed him.

Tabor, unable to face ruin commits suicide. McCray realizing that he is responsible for Tabor's end, buys the Tabor home at a public sale and presents it to the widow. Mrs. Tabor's hatred of McCray is so intense that she would have driven the man from the house had not Willard her husband's partner induced her to play McCray along in the hope of securing a market, tip through which they might retrieve their losses.

Ann Tabor secures little information from McCray who makes it a rule to discuss business secrets with no one. He calls frequently at the Tabor home. He meets the daughter of Anne's small son, Richard. Mrs. Tabor is beginning to feel that her task is a hopeless one. Richard occasionally tells her some vital news. He repeats that he had heard McCray tell Andy Cairn an old friend of his that he intended to send United Motors up to 500.

Encouraged by Willard, Anne and Richard accompany McCray to a steel workers' picnic on the day the big jump in the stock market is planned. Willard warns Mrs. Tabor that her part of the game is to keep McCray at the picnic until the stock exchange closes. She has no difficulty in doing this. Despite her fabled hatred for McCray, Anne is intrigued by the rough but vital merrymakings. Without realizing it, Mrs. Tabor begins to fall in love with McCray.

Willard plays his game on the Stock Exchange effectively. McCray returns from the picnic to find himself penniless. He takes his losses like a man. His manner so impresses Mrs. Tabor that she cannot enjoy her victory. When McCray comes to say good-bye, she realizes that she loves him and cannot allow him to depart.

This wonderful story is all to be seen in the 100 p.c. talkies showing at the Elite Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Don't miss this feature.

NO ADVANCE LIKELY COST OF GASOLINE

OIL COMPANY OFFICIALS STATE TARIFF WILL NOT CAUSE BOOST

TORONTO—"It will be necessary to study the revision before making any detailed statement" said C. P. Stillman, president of Imperial Oil, Limited, discussing the tariff placed on refined gasoline.

"One can say in general however that the change will give an impetus to the refining of petroleum in Canada which is one of the largest industries in this country and that the consumer of gasoline will not feel any ill effects."

S. R. Parsons, of the British American Oil Company said: "It will mean that the Canadian refineries will be able to employ more men and a greater proportion of the total consumption of gasoline will be manufactured in Canada. It will not mean a higher price for gasoline."

WHEAT SHIPPED TO BRAZIL FROM MONTREAL

MONTREAL—Shipment of a large consignment of wheat to Brazil on Thursday stirred up considerable interest in Montreal grain circles as it was the first time that the South American republic had imported Canadian wheat, according to available records.

The shipment composed of 206,532 bushels of No. 1 and No. 2 North end left on the S.S. Ancon for Rio de Janeiro. It was believed here it would be used for blending by one of the flour mills in that city and that if it was considered satisfactory additional shipments would be made.

The proximity of Brazil to such a great wheat producing and exporting country as Argentina together with the fact that Southern Brazil has a large wheat crop attracted particular attention to the shipment.

The new school premises on Fifth avenue have now been stuccoed and fixed up to make all snug for the winter months.

WAINWRIGHT SENT FAIR CONTINGENT

BIG AIR CIRCUS IN CITY SAW A NUMBER OF LOCAL MOTORISTS

A nice number of Wainwright folks attended the big air circus which was staged in Edmonton last week together with the reliability air tour which is circumnavigating half of North America and Canada.

Real, real early on Wednesday morning with just a cup of coffee for a starter those travelling by motor were up and away while a number left on Tuesday by both car and train.

Owing to some delay in the visiting planes arrival from Saskatoon the previous stop, the programme of events was somewhat curtailed, but those which were put on were indeed thrilling.

Capt. Hawkes of the tour, in his Mystery plane, provided most of the thrills, and held the crowd breathless while he travelled along at a rate of over two hundred miles per hour; some of which flying was done so low that one almost felt inclined to bend down to be missed.

A prancing jump from the actual clouds was something that held the interest of the 40,000 in attendance, and the jumper made a very neat drop almost into the inner ring of the airport. Bombing from the air, flying upside down, and many other novelties of this mode of travel were all indulged in by the students.

As far as is known the motorists from town all returned without mishap while navigating the thickly crowded streets of the big city, although we understand that one well-known local driver was seen carrying a painful quantity of gasoline to his own driveway before being able to proceed to the airport! (Poor judgment, W. H.)

We learn, too, that Monty seized the opportunity to view the inside of "Crazy John's" flying grocery store, to plums, of gasoline down his own driveway while he was in this manner.

Incidentally the Capt. Hawkes referred to above made the next leg of the journey—Edmonton to Calgary on Thursday in exactly 43 minutes which is somewhat of a time-saver!

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Witham moved over from Irma on Thursday last to spend the evening with friends.

After a holiday spent at Vancouver with friends Mr. and Mrs. Bob Tierney have now returned home.

NEAR TRAGEDY AT RIBSTONE CROSSING

WOMAN & FOUR CHILDREN IN STALLED CAR STRUCK BY C.N.R. FREIGHT

On Sunday evening last at 6.55 Mrs. W. B. Robertson, who with four young children was travelling eastward from Wainwright to a new home in Saskatchewan, had the misfortune to stall the engine of her car on a C.N.R. crossing near Ribstone with the result that the car was struck by the engine of train No. 404 and all the car's passengers suffered injury.

From information to hand it appears that the left step of the freight train's engine struck the car at the front end, the motor vehicle being partly on and partly off the track.

The train was immediately stopped and the crew at once notified Dr. W. Moore of Edmonton. After giving relief to the whole of the car's occupants he ordered their removal to the hospital, and The Confederation (No. 4), which was just due to reach the scene of the accident, was stopped and the patients taken to the Muncie Hospital at Unity.

The names of the injured are: Mrs. W. B. Robertson (driving), scalp wounds and shock.

Lorrie Dingman, head and abdominal wounds and left arm broken.

Joyce Dingman, cut and internal injuries.

Ruth Dingman, cuts and shock.

Jane Dingman, contusions.

At latest reports from the hospital the patients are all progressing favorably.

MEDICAL SERVICES IN LONELY AREAS

CANADIAN PROVINCE WORKING OUT SCHEME WITH CONSID-ERABLE SUCCESS

REGINA—The problem of medical service for the sparsely settled areas of a new country is being solved in Saskatchewan by a system which provides for municipal doctors. Under a law which is little more than a year old distinct progress has been made in the solution of a problem which presents itself to every pioneer family.

Of Saskatchewan's 866,700 people scattered over 251,700 square miles 14.4 per cent live in the eight cities, 7.7 per cent in the eighty towns, 8.4 per cent in the villages, 65.3 in the 301 or 302 rural municipalities and 2.9 per cent in unorganized territory, the remaining 1.3 per cent being Indians on their reservations. Thus there is an extensive area needing medical service but which makes little appeal to the young doctor seeking to earn an immediate livelihood and to establish himself professionally.

The new Rural Municipality Act gives to every Rural Municipality the right to make a grant up to $1,500 annually to a legally qualified medical practitioner who is a resident or is easily accessible on call, or it may guarantee him income to that figure. The municipal doctor may give free medical service to Indians, and he may also perform the duties of health officer. On the demand of 25 tax-payers the council must submit a by-law to the electors empowering council to engage a physician for full-time services at a salary not exceeding $5,000 per year.

Already, under this co-operative health measure, there are thirteen rural municipalities paying medical grants of from $600 to $1500 annually. Nineteen other municipalities have engaged municipal doctors at salaries varying from $3,500 to $5,000 per year. The system is giving much satisfaction, for it guarantees to the physician a reasonable income and gives the settlers needed medical service.

BOARD OF TRADE GENERAL MEETING

A meeting of the Board of Trade will be held TONIGHT (Wednesday) at eight o'clock in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall.

All interested are asked to be present, when matters of importance in addition to the general business will be transacted.

TENTH FORTNIGHTLY ALTA. CROP REPORT

Thrashing is again under way following a period of unsettled weather or over the greater part of the Province, which delayed operations to some extent. Delayed Districts report thrashing 90 per cent completed with the exception of irrigated areas where 50 per cent remains to be done. In Central and Northern parts thrashing delays have been of frequent occurrence due to rain and the amount threshed varies from 5 per cent to 25 per cent.

Cutting of grain for threshing is completed. In some areas cutting of Green Feed is still in progress. This is particularly true of the east central part of the Province where a good crop of Green Feed is being cut on fields where the first crop was destroyed by high winds and drought. The absence of frost until late in the season has been a factor in greatly increasing yields of Grain and Feed in this area over early expectations.

Frost was general on the night of September 18th but very little damage reported, due to the advanced stage of maturity of the crop.

Threshers' returns indicate that the quality of Wheat is high. The yield according to these returns will be satisfactory and will be higher than was anticipated.

Phyllis In A Fix

BY HELEN CLIFTON

"Swade Holidays," reflected Ronnie Weston, "were not made to be spent alone."

He was sprawling in a deckchair, facing the sad sea waves and thus he meditated. And the immediate reason for his somewhat pessimistic frame of mind was a case of soap-shots attached to the sea-wall on his right.

Or, to be strictly accurate, it was a particular 'soap' in the case which had given rise to Ronnie's gloom. The subject, was a remarkably pretty girl who was perched upon a groyne her slender feet swinging just clear of the water. Her vivid little face was upturned, and her eyes seemed to be smiling straight into Ronnie's.

Now, up to the moment some fifteen minutes before, when he had first caught sight of this delightful picture, Ronnie had voted this old earth a pleasant enough place.

Arriving at Southcliffe on the previous day for his fortnight's annual holiday from the office, he had slept like a healthy log, taken an early morning dip, worked a hearty breakfast, and come out for a pleasant loaf on the beach with his newspaper and cigarette. En route his gaze had been caught and held by the girl in the soap shot case. And at that moment he had been a prey to slight melancholy.

After all, it was pretty poisonous to be on one's own at the seaside! How topping it would be to have a girl pal—that girl in the soapshot case, for instance—to go about with him! She looked a bit lonely, too, though no doubt she was booked! Such a frightfully pretty girl would be a bit if he could only get to know her!

Heaving a sigh which nearly removed a nearby kiosk, Ronnie got up and sauntered over for another surreptitious look at the fascinating 'soap.' And it was at this moment that the miracle happened.

Down the steps which led from the promenade above a girl came running—the girl! Tendrils of bright hair were blowing under her litte pull-on, the sea-wind had whipped a delicious color into her cheeks, and she was far prettier than any mere black and white photograph. But her blue eyes looked scared and she glanced behind her apprehensively as she came.

An automatic machine was placed close to the soapshots, and here she paused, apparently to extract a pack of chocolate. But in the same moment, a breathless agitated whisper reached Ronnie's ear.

"Oh, please don't turn around or seem surprised. But would you very much mind standing right in front of the photographs for a minute?"

Ronnie was an intelligent lad, and grasped the situation in a flash. For some reason the girl did not want that soapshot to be seen! With praise worthy promptness he put six feet of hefty, sunburnt young manhood squarely in front of the glass case—just as another lady came down the steps.

This second one, who was well past youth, was tall and of singularly determined aspect. Her eminently sensible hat was placed squarely upon her cropped head, she walked with an uncompromising stride and looked as though she held decided views upon every subject and allowed no arguments over any one of them.

Reaching the foot of the steps she darted a comprehensive glance around and addressed the girl.

"I shan't stay here, Phyllis," she stated in loud, decisive tones. "The jazz noises from that beach cafe are most annoying, and this breeze would blow all my papers into confusion. We've a lot of work to get through before lunch, and we can't have any distractions. Come along to the beach hut."

She strode across the shingle leaving the girl to follow obediently. And the two vanished over a low groyne.

But Ronnie hung about in the thrilling conviction that further developments would come of the little incident. And in this he proved correct. For less than half an hour later, the girl came running back—alone.

"I felt I must come and thank you and explain," she began, blushing in the most adorable fashion, while Ronnie stood bare-headed. "You must have thought me awfully odd and unconvivial and that. But I was in a dreadful fix!"

"Quite Delighted!" responded Ronnie vaguely, but with intense fervor.

"You see, I'm staying down here with my aunt," the girl went on in frank confidence, "and she's frightfully interested in worthwhile sorts of things—uplift and good works and that. And I—well, I'm afraid they are all above me."

"Me too, interjected Ronnie emphatically.

"So yesterday, when she asked me to go to a lecture with her on some awfully good cause I had—a head ache and I stayed behind. Then after she had gone the headache went too, she blushed again guiltily and looked more adorable than ever," so I came down here for a dip. I had no idea that hateful camera-man was snapping me till I heard his beastly machine click. And I was scared of aunt seeing that snap this morning. She would naturally have felt angry and hurt that I had come here instead of going to the lecture. So it seemed frightfully mean and deceitful, but that's why I asked you—"

She paused a moment in her candid confession. Then ended with a little sob.

"I'm very grateful to you!"

"Not a bit! Awfully glad to be of use!" Ronnie assured her and looked it. "Jolly place, Southcliffe, isn't it?"

"Topping!" agreed the girl.

They smiled at one another with the frank camaraderie of today. And Ronnie ventured on a leading question.

"I only came down yesterday. Er—are you making a long stay?"

"The conversation was well under way. And as they strolled towards a beach-kiosk where the girl intended to make some trifling purchases, they chatted with light hearted freedom."

Ronnie confided that he was down for his summer holidays, but was finding it rather gasty, on his own. Phyllis—topping name—announced that she was acting as companion-secretary to her aunt Hepzibah Great-

—who, Ronnie gathered, had a mind above laughter and lipstick, sland, sundae, and frivolities in general.

"You see aunt's very clever and awfully interested in organizing charities and things like that," Phyllis explained. "So I—"

"So there you are, Phyllis. You were so long getting that sealing-wax that I came to look for you!"

A quick, determined voice broke abruptly, through Phyllis' words. "Turning in started unless the young pair beheld Miss Hepzibah just behind them."

"A friend of yours, I presume," she commented, while her penetrating glance swept over Ronnie from his beautifully groomed hair to his immaculate tennis shoes. "I wasn't aware that you knew anyone down here."

She glanced at her niece, evidently expecting an introduction. But unhookily the two had not yet exchanged their full names. And there was a moment's frightful suspense while their respective complexions grew to rival one another in brilliance of tint. Then with a little gasp, Phyllis spoke.

"This is Mr.—Mr. Smith, aunt."

"—I—net live in London."

"Oh!" the elder lady turned her penetrating regard upon Ronnie. "You're not. And what part of London may you come from young man?"

"Er—Hamptstead," stammered Ronnie, who hailed not from London, but from Kent.

He produced a handkerchief and wiped his burning young face. "I see," said Miss Hepzibah nodding.

"I know Hamptstead very well in deed," she observed in her loud, decided voice. "It is about the only London suburb in which a gentleman can reside. There are some very fine buildings there."

She plunged into a very emphatic monologue upon the subject of public buildings charitable institutions, and Good Works generally, and Phyllis returning in inward perturbation from a belated purchase of sealing-wax, was just in time to hear Ronnie accepting an invitation to tea in the beach-hut.

"I have just been telling Mr. Smith about the beach-fete I am helping to organize for the Southcliffe Charitable Institution," explained Miss Hepzibah complacently. "And I have practically persuaded him—coerced would have been a better word—into taking charge of the Prize Competitions. There is a serious dearth of young men among our helpers. The fact is, most youths of the present day are singularly selfish, shallow, and inconsiderate, and haven't an idea beyond frivolous amusement."

She entirely monopolized Mr. Smith on the way to the beach-hut which was situated upon a quiet strip of grassy shingle. But he insisted upon getting the water for the coffee, from a nearby stand, and on helping Phyllis with the folding table and chairs.

And a little later, while Miss Hepzibah was busily writing to the fete committee, the two, on the pretext of washing up the cups, got a few minutes to themselves.

"I feel so frightfully guilty and mean about it all!" declared Phyllis. "Phyllis Wayland, to give her full name—in conscience-stricken tones. "And I am so blasé for you getting into this dreadful muddle. What good shall I do?"

She looked at Ronnie with soft, remorseful eyes. They were as blue as the speedwell staring the grassy bank which sloped up at the back of the beach-hut. And he smiled back at her with joyous reassurance.

"The whole thing's gone too deep to do anything about it now!" he pronounced accepting a saucer from her pretty fingers, and vigorously wiping it. "The bit of a mix-up's doing no harm to anyone, and it's straightened itself out somehow. And, anyway, it is worth it."

The last fervently spoken clause seemed somewhat vague. But the two seemed to understand it, for Phyllis blushed and smiled as Ronnie's boyish eager gaze met hers.

"Let it rip," he advised optimistically.

So they let it rip. Though neither realized where the 'ripping' process was going to land them.

For several halcyon days things went like velvet.

From morning coffee in the beach-hut, Mr. Smith—whose zeal and enthusiasm in the matter of the beach-fete had caused him to rise rapidly in Miss Hepzibah's good graces, was promoted to tea at the pretty bungalow she had taken for the summer.

Now the verandah of the bungalow was screened from the gaze of passer-by's by means of masses of climbing roses and honeysuckle. And in the evening Phyll and Ronnie would retire to the verandah, presumably to discuss and arrange details of the fete approaching for the summer.

As a matter of fact, however, their conversation invariably drifted to more personal and interesting topics. And this deviation was responsible for a fateful happening which—

But this is the way things worked out.

On a certain evening—the one before the great day of the beach-fete, to be exact, Ronnie had been invited to dinner. And afterwards Phyllis and he had withdrawn to the verandah for a final consultation on the list of competitions and prizes.

Ronnie, who was presenting two handsome prizes of a tennis-racket and cricket-pencil, he was holding Phyllis' hand. Her eyes looked bluer than ever and her lips were the reddest and sweetest in the whole world.

"Phyll!" he whispered. "I say, Phyll! Isn't this simply gorgeous—daring?"

"Yes—quite," Phyllis whispered back with an adorable smile.

And the forgotten notebook slid to the ground as she slipped into his eager arms.

Now a lapse of memory is natural enough at such a moment. But it was unfortunate that Miss Hepzibah should step out on the verandah that night to consult the weather signs that.

Phyll had slipped off to bed with Ronnie's parting words. "We'll tell your aunt everything after the show tomorrow darling," ringing in her ears. And after tapping the barometer, which stood firm at "Fair" Miss Hepzibah emerged on to the verandah for a personal survey.

The night was cloudless, the moon full and brilliant—so brilliant that it picked out with unerring accuracy two wicker chairs and a table close together and an open pocket book lying beside one of them.

"Mr. Smith" had evidently dropped it, was Miss Hepzibah's thought as she picked it up and carried it into the room beyond, and then, as her glasses fell mechanically upon the open page, she stood staring at the book in surprise.

For the name "R. Weston was written across the page. And a hasty and—in the circumstances—almost inexact (Continued on page 7)

The Outcast

The newcomer turned back toward Calvey with an ugly leer upon his face.

"So it's Calvey here, is it?" he demanded. "It was the Honourable Ronald Calvey Treet at Monte Carlo. The fellow is a sharper and an adventurer," he continued raising his voice so that those who were standing around could hear. "With two others of his own kind he robbed me of four thousand pounds at baccarat last month."

The listeners all drew closer, there was a breathless silence. Only Pamela laughed at Calvey quite naturally, but a little scornfully.

"Robbed you indeed!" she exclaimed. "No one is likely to believe that, Mr. Goldberg."

"It's the solemn truth," Mr. Goldberg declared, "and what's more he can't deny it."

There was one awful moment of silence during which Pamela's heart stood still. Then Calvey replied, and although he did not raise his voice in the slightest, every word he said was distinctly audible to all of them.

"I do deny it absolutely," he asserted. "I regret having to admit that I was in company with men who have been pronounced card-sharps, but I was ignorant of the fact, and directly I knew it I returned the whole of my winnings to the directors of the club where the affair took place."

"Rubbish!" Mr. Goldberg cried excitedly. "He was seven hundred pounds out of four thousand. You were one of the gang Calvey, or whatever you call yourself; and if you're the sort of person they admit here—well, I don't set foot in the hotel that is all. It's in your hands, Mr. Huber, entirely in your hands."

The hotel proprietor shrugged his shoulders. He gestulated with the palms of his hands, turning as though in appeal for their sympathies to the little crowd of bystanders. How was it possible for him to arrive at any decision save one? Mr. Calvey occupied a single room, for which he paid a moderate price. He had no friends in the hotel and no following.

Mr. Goldberg on the other hand occupied with his wife and family and servants, the greater part of one floor for which accommodations he paid a sum befitting his means. The rooms had been kept waiting for him, there was no one else likely to engage them. Mr. Huber turned regretfully toward Calvey. There could be little doubt as to what his decision would have been if he had ever been called upon to make it. At that moment, however, Fate intervened. Almost unnoticed during the progress of the little scene, another large touring car had drawn up behind Mr. Goldberg's. An occupant, a tall, dark man, good looking and obviously English came stroking toward the group with a slightly bewildered expression. Then he came up and laid his hand familiarly upon Calvey's shoulder.

"Hallo, Ronny!" he exclaimed "what is going on here? Who's the funny little man who can't keep still?"

Calvey started. He looked at the newcomer in amazement.

"Morchester!" he exclaimed. "Dick! Why what on earth are you doing here?"

"First of all, tell me what's the trouble," the newcomer insisted. "I may be my fancy, but you seem to be mixed up in it somehow."

Calvey laughed a little bitterly. He pointed to Mr. Goldberg.

"This is the person who lost his money that night at baccarat," he explained. "He had just arrived here and recognized me. Now he refuses to stay unless I am turned out, that's all."

Calvey's new friend whistled softly. Mr. Goldberg abowed his way to their side.

"I don't know who you may be, sir," he declared loudly, "and I don't care; but my charge against that man is that he was one of a gang of sharpsters who robbed me of four thousand pounds at baccarat last month."

"So you're Mr. Goldberg, are you?" he said. "Well, sir, I am pleased to be able to tell you that, under the presidency of the grand Duke and one of the governors a small committee to whom my cousin here appealed has pronounced him innocent of any complicity in the matter. His membership of the club and his entrance to the Rooms have been restored, and I have an autograph letter in my pocket from his Serene Highness congratulating him on the result."

Mr. Goldberg stared at the speaker open-mouthed. He made one more attempt at bluster.

"That's all very well," he declared. "But I don't know who you are from Adam!"

"I don't suppose that you do," the newcomer remarked dryly. "There are several people in the hotel, however, who do, including, I think, Mr. Huber."

"Certainly, your Grace," the latter replied with a low bow.

"The Duke of Morchester," he added in an awed whisper to Mr. Goldberg.

Mr. Goldberg was plainly nonplussed.

"But what about my money?" he cried—"my four thousand pounds?"

The Duke looked at him a moment through his eyelids, as one might look at some interesting specimen of the insect world.

"Confound you and your money, sir," he said turning on his heel. "Come on, Ronny, and show me where you've got a drink," he added, passing his arm through his cousin's. "It's a dusty ride from Monte Carlo."

"You're sure it is all right?" Calvey gasped.

"Right as rain," Morchester declared. "Who's the pretty, fair-haired girl slipped away then? She was standing by your side when the row was on."

"The dearest little woman in the world!" Calvey exclaimed fervently. "Glad you've found her at last," his cousin remarked dryly. "It was about time."

Pamela the next morning was thus five. It was not until within a few minutes of the time fixed for his departure that Calvey found her. She was sitting on the trunk of a false tree near one of the paths at the back of the hotel. Something about her appearance at the sight of him seemed to suggest that she was hiding. Calvey looked at her reproachfully.

"Since ten o'clock he declared, seating himself beside her, 'I have been looking for you.'

"This is a bad," she replied, with a touch of her old lightning, "especially as I must go directly. My aunt is waiting for me to take her for a walk."

"Then your aunt must wait," he said firmly. "I am going away in a few minutes with Morchester. There is something I want to say to you first, something I must say."

"Going away!" she repeated a little blankly.

"My cousin wants me to stay with him for a few days at Monte Carlo," he explained, "I think perhaps it would be best for me to do so. Please don't be so nervous, he went on, a shade of bitterness creeping into his tone. "I only want to tell you that I haven't misunderstood anything. I am not such an idiot as that."

She looked at him wonderingly and almost immediately dropped her eyes.

"I have come," he continued, "to thank you from the very bottom of my heart for your kindness to a poor outcast. I am glad that Morchester turned up, and that you know that I am not entirely a wrong one. But I am bad enough, Heaven knows!"

"Are you?" she murmured.

"I don't think," he went on, "that I have ever regretted it quite so much as I do now. You see, I have lived in the darkness so long that it never seemed possible to me that my day too might come; that you, Pamela dear, were anywhere alive in the world to touch the clouds with your fairy fingers and let the sunlight through. If I had known—"

"If you had known?" she whispered.

"I should have lived a different life," he declared with quiet passion. "I should not be sitting by your side, a tired pleasure-sated man of forty, with no profession nor any useful place."

"FILLING THE CELLAR WITH WINTER FOODS"

Ventilation is an important factor in keeping fruits and vegetables.

The storing of an adequate supply of fruits and vegetables throughout the winter provides no extraordinary problems. Experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have some useful suggestions in this connection.

As a general rule, either the old root cellar or house cellar is used. Adequate provision should be made for ventilation through the use of cold air intakes and outlet flues, having valves by which to regulate the movement of the air. In connection with the intake flue, care should be taken to prevent "freezing" air entering the cellar. Care should also be taken to exclude all light from the storage cellar.

With apples and pears only the best grade of fruit should be placed in storage and boxes or barrels should be used. The storage cellar should be such as will insure that the temperature will not fall below freezing point. Around 36 degrees Fahrenheit with relatively moist temperature is best and should keep the fruit in splendid shape throughout the winter.

For most vegetables the bin with slatted sides and bottom, providing circulation to prevent heating, are desirable. These should be narrow and not too large in size.

Celery keeps best when planted with the roots on in sand on the cellar floor with the plants set closely in rows six to eight inches apart.

Cabbage may be treated in the same way as celery but equally good is the slatted tray method, tier above tier, with heads placed two deep on each tray.

Onions require dry storage at a temperature around 34 degrees to 36 degrees Fahrenheit.

Squash, vegetable marrow, and pumpkins also require dry storage but they keep best in a warmer temperature, ranging around 65 degrees Fahrenheit.

ce in the world, with simply a taste for athletics and a weakness for gambling. To my dying day there is nothing else in life I shall regret like this."

"Is that what you wanted to tell me?" she asked.

"This and to thank you," he replied. "These are poor words aren't they? They mean a good deal to me, though. And I want you above all to know, he went on earnestly, 'that I haven't really misunderstood, and that it was your dear, kind, little heart which made you come and talk to me because you saw I was at Monte Carlo. You needn't have hid away from me this morning. I understood."

"Did you?" she murmured.

Calvey's fingers closed upon hers.

"So much so," he continued, "that I nearly went away without seeing you at all, only I thought that you might like to know this. I have finished with my present life. Morchester and I talked it out last night. It's late to make a start, but he is going to get me a job out in Africa somewhere."

"That's one reason why we are hurrying off. There's a man at Monte Carlo who's in the Government and Dicky hopes to have it all fixed up by the end of the week. And it's all you," he added, with a sudden curious little break in his voice.

Pamela leaned towards him, so close that her breath fell upon his cheek, her lips almost touched his.

"After all, you are a very stupid person," she declared. "I should like to come to Africa, too."

BOY SCOUTS AS CRIMINALS

A Judge of one of our large cities was suffering from a slight attack of rheumatism so that his usual cheerful disposition was all awry.

A tiny boy scout, hurrying along on some errand, brushed against the Judge and brought his rheumatism to mind. The boy apologized but the Judge was plainly annoyed.

"Those boy scouts are everywhere," he said, turning to a friend. "They bump into me on the street, I see them along the country lanes, they carry flags in parades, they're always trying to help me across the street when I happen to limp a bit—oh, I see them everywhere."

"Did one ever appear before you in Juvenile Court?" asked his friend.

The Judge did not reply for a moment but thought deeply. He then turned to the other with a smile.

"Never in my whole career," he said. "Perhaps there is something to this scout movement after all."

It is interesting to know that rarely if ever, does a boy scout in good standing appear before Judge or magistrate as a culprit. This has become so noticeable that eminent jurists constantly mention it when addressing groups of adults who might be interested in the boy scout movement.

Undoubtedly there is something to a movement which can touch one-seventh of America's boys and keep them from crime.

THE DOMINION UNEMPLOYMENT AID

Premier Bennett and his Parliamentary supporters are under way with their plans for relieving unemployment in Canada, which they had proposed to bring down at an important special session of the new Parliament. Mr. Bennett would be on a sounder ground if he would not dally with the idea that the late government's policy was any factor of any account, even taking the extreme protectionist view, in the unemployment situation, that appears to be a worldwide phase of industry. And it is probably more than the emergency which he would hope; it is not unlike that there with have to be strenuous modern economic wrestling with the industrial situation—something much more than the "doles" and "dainties" which may tide over some of the difficulties for the present.

The government's recommendation of 20 millions for the emergency situation of unemployment in Canada, which passed the Commons unanimously, will be spent largely in co-operation with the provincial governments and with the municipalities, mostly through the provincial governments. Part of it will be devoted to the construction of federal public works, which can be hurried up a year or two instead of being left to the normal course of federal budgetary grants. It is expected that the Trans-Canada highway will come in for an important share of the grant. Mr. Bennett, defined the obligation of the new government regarding this highway to be the provision of dominion aid for the unsettled miles of road which are needed to connect the main provincial arteries—aid for the maintenance of highways connecting one province with another, and aid for the construction of the Northwestern Ontario section north of the Lakes to Manitoba and Winnipeg, and for the Alberta-British Columbia section across the Rockies. The government will pay from this twenty millions one-third of the charges on municipal unemployed relief funds; after the war the dominion, the provincial and the municipal governments each paid one-third. Federal advances will be forthcoming, the Premier estimated, for the carrying out of public works in local centres. The bill had not passed through committee in Commons before Monday.

It is expected that the unemployment will be more acute after the harvest and fall work than it is just at present, and the 20 million grant is to tide us through the winter. It is more serious, too, apparently, in the industrial centres of Eastern Canada than in Western Canada. Whether there will be need for agricultural aid, and whether it will be paid from this fund, does not appear to have been discussed in the House, at least in any definite form—Red Deer Advocate.

CANADIAN WHEAT IS BEING SOLD

While the present demand for Canadian wheat is not as keen as it might be there are increasing evidences that the European buyer is again in the market. There is a steady export from both Montreal and Vancouver and grain is being shipped in large volume to the ocean ports to await call from overseas as the Calgary Herald.

The mistake made last year of holding wheat for higher prices is not being repeated this year. The prevailing world price is low, but there are plenty of offerings at the present levels. The large carry-over from last year makes necessary as rapid export as possible this year. Grain stored in elevators piles up carrying charges which in turn become onerous and the more wheat that Canada can ship out immediately, the better, because there is an entirely new complexion on the situation. The experience of the last year revealed that the world is not dependent on Canadian wheat. In recent years other countries have gone in for wheat raising on an extensive scale, and for the present at any rate the world is not faced with a shortage of the cereal.

Some figures quoted in a recent issue of the New York Times are illuminative. Europe's largest harvest of wheat thirty years ago was only 1,600,000,000 bushels. It raised 2,200,000,000 bushels last year. In 1900 the United States produced 772,000,000 bushels. By last year the area and the production were more than doubled. Thirty years ago the Canadian prairie provinces were negligible as wheat-raising centres. Today they are the third largest wheat producing areas in the world, raising 567,000,000 bushels in 1928. Similar comments may be made with regard to Australia, the Argentine and Russia. An increase of fifty per cent in production in thirty years makes liberal provision for increased population.

The Times points out that there is uncertainty how far the wheat-consuming capacity of the world will be stimulated by present low prices. All of which leads to the observation that both pool officials and line companies were badly astray in their estimates of the world crop last year.

UNFAIR REFLECTION CANADIAN PRESS

The Prime Minister has impugned the press of Canada as inaccurate and in instances which he did not specify, deliberate in misrepresentation. The Premier is wrong in his estimate and untrue in his reflection upon the press, an honorable institution.

Mr. Bennett has characterized the Calgary newspaper reports of his address in this city as nonsense. The Herald, by employing trained verbatim shorthand writers, independent of its staff, reported Mr. Bennett exactly as he spoke. The Herald will be quite prepared to sustain before the public its report on anything Mr. Bennett said.

The Prime Minister appears to think that speaking over the radio is more satisfactory to politicians than newspaper reports of what was stated. The fact is that a newspaper report, if honestly written as practically all newspaper reports are written on either side of politics, is a written record, while the radio talk vanishes into the ether, leaving no direct responsibility.

The Herald does not trouble on its own behalf to debate with the Prime Minister the accuracy of its report of anything he may have said within the radius of its influence, but it does object to what it regards as an unfair reflection upon the press of Canada, which, as a whole, has conducted controversial politics on a fair basis than the politicians.

HOW MUCH TO THE FARMER

By R. J. DeChamant

Wheat is low in price. Bread is dear. Wheat drops in price—bread remains unchanged.

Why doesn't the price of bread follow the downward trend of wheat?

How much does the farmer get out of the wheat which goes into a loaf of bread?

These and similar questions are heard from time to time. This brief note is an attempt to answer them.

Chas. V. Peterson has written a booklet entitled, "Wheat, the Riddle of Markets." On page 14 of a rather interesting story he gives the distribution of the consumers' price of a pound loaf of bread. The statement tells who gets the money when your wife buys a loaf.

But first a word as to Chas. V. Peterson before someone asks the pertinent or impertinent question as to what he knows about it. Mr. Peterson has been and is now a wheat grower on a large scale. He is the author of "The Farm and Ranch Review" of Calgary and a keen student of Agricultural problems. Peterson knows facts and is fair enough to state them. In a matter of this kind he may be considered an authority.

Besides these figures are corroborated by the Federal Trade Commission of the United States. The table follows:

| Distribution of the Consumers' Price of a Pound of Bread. | | | |
|---|--------|--------|--|
| Item | | | |
| Per Cent of | | | |
| Found of Bread | | | |
| Per Cent of | | | |
| Retail Price | | | |
| Country of Wheat | 1.145c | 13.40 | |
| Country Elevator | 0.068c | 0.79 | |
| Transportation and terminal agencies for | | | |
| Wheat | 0.278c | 3.25 | |
| Flour Mills | 0.406c | 4.75 | |
| Transportation agencies | | | |
| for flour | 0.263c | 3.08 | |
| Wholesale Baker | 5.110c | 59.77 | |
| Retail Grocer | 1.279c | 14.96 | |
| Total | 8.549c | 100.00 | |

The average loaf weighs 1½ lbs.—It would seem therefore that the farmer or out of the wheat entering the loaf gets 1.171c—the baker 7.665c. This however contemplates a loaf selling for 12.823c which is higher than the average at the present time. Mr. Peterson's figures cover a two year average, a period in which bread prices were slightly higher and go back to what the farmer actually receives for his wheat and not the nominal price. These however are figures to shoot at. If the bakers are not satisfied with the figures they can of course explain—the farmers have already registered their protests. It seems to be a point which has a measure of justification.

Rust Dusting Pays

A decided increase in yield in favor of the dusted crops is reported by rust research experts of the Federal Department of Agriculture. Experiments show that the aeroplane is well suited to the dusting of large areas. Rust can not be controlled by shading but even in the absence of severe rust infection the beneficial effects of dusting are evident. Sulphur dust is found particularly effective in the control of other stem and leaf diseases. In practically every case there was a decided increase in yield in the dusted crop.

A spectacular high line trail ride about 7,000 feet above sea level from Banff to Lake Louise has just been inspected and found feasible by J. Murray Gibson and Jim Brewster. It is 27 miles west of Banff over timber line to a ridge looking down on the little known glacier-fed Taylor Lake and following the 7,000-foot contour to the Consolation Lake trail leading to Moraine Lake. It commands a magnificent view of the glacial country north of the Canadian Pacific Railway as far as the Bow Lakes and south to Mt. Assiniboine. It is 60 miles long and will probably be used for the annual official sampling trip of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies next year.

"I do not believe that the talking films will ever take the place of the legitimate stage. People still appear to be building ordinary theatres," said Lady Diana Manners, famous English society beauty and equally famous as the heroine of "The Miracle" during its New York and Boston productions, who arrived at the Windsor street station, Montreal, recently, on her first visit to Canada.

The Quebec Festival of French-Canadian Folk Lore and Handicrafts at which habitant artists have been bred on the soil of Quebec province, and well-known artists from far and wide rival one another in recovering the spirit of Old France, and old New France and the age-old culture of the Gallic race, will be held this year October 16-18, according to an announcement made by the Canadian Pacific Railway, organizers of the Festival.

Travelling in two Canadian Pacific special trains, about 250 of the most eminent figures in the British medical world left Montreal for Winnipeg to attend the first convention of the British Medical Association held in Winnipeg. They were preceded by a group of 50 members of the British Tuberculosis Association, who attended a convention of tuberculosis specialists at Nisette, Man., before going to Winnipeg.

"In view of the fact that this is the last year in which Canada has a seat on the Council of the League of Nations, I could not resist the request made to me by the Prime Minister to represent the Dominion at Geneva," said Sir Robert Laird Borden, former Prime Minister of Canada, as he sailed for Europe recently aboard the Empress of Scotland.

Every activity of the Canadian Pacific Railway was stressed this year at the National Exhibition at Toronto, which was opened formally by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the road. An outstanding feature of the company's exhibit was the model of the new $2,500,000 Empress of Britain, greatest inter-empire passenger vessel, launched by the Prince of Wales last June and to be in service between Quebec and Great Britain next year.

OLDSMOBILE EARNS YOUR CONFIDENCE

YOUR first appraisal of Oldsmobile leaves you with a friendly feeling of confidence towards this high-spirited car whose very lines suggest staunch build and absolute dependability.

But not until you have driven it ten thousand miles or more . . . under every motoring condition . . . and in all kinds of weather . . . will you fully realize how Oldsmobile earns and keeps your confidence.

You will discover that Oldsmobile, like a true friend, becomes even more trustworthy . . . that it inspires deeper confidence the longer it serves you. Like thousands of other Oldsmobile owners, you will learn that its dependability is based not alone on the time-proven soundness of Oldsmobile design, but also on such mechanical refinements as a mighty 62-horsepower engine mounted on rubber . . . long, flexible springs controlled by hydraulic shock absorbers . . . big, weatherproof, four-wheel brakes . . . and a sloping, non-glare windshield.

An opportunity to prove how Oldsmobile earns confidence awaits you at our showrooms. Drive Oldsmobile yourself, and let this splendid car demonstrate for itself the qualities owners everywhere claim for it. WINTERING OF DAIRY HEIFERS

(Experimental Farms Note)

The usefulness of the dairy heifer depends upon proper development during the growing period. In order to insure this the following factors must be considered: breeding, feeding, housing, and care and management. In order to produce the desired results on reaching maturity the heifer must be made of rugged and well-scaled ranch which will promote the normal development of all vital organs.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Rothbar, Saskatchewan, different methods of housing dairy heifers from six months to two years old have been practiced. Five heifers born in the months of March and April 1929 were wintered in corrals where they were protected from the cold winds and had access to dry, comfortable beds. They were fed a ration consisting of 10 pounds of a rough grass 15 to 20 pounds of timothy and 3 or 4 pounds of meal. The meal mixture consisted of 2 parts of oat chop, 1 part bran, and 1 part barley chop. Besides this they had access to oat straw. The five heifers weighed an average 591 pounds on December 15 and on April 1 they weighed an average of 730 pounds, showing an average daily gain of 1.3 pounds per animal per day. The feed which the above heifers received was home grown with the exception of the bran. The heifers wintered in the corrals were made of rugged, free in water and made a regular feeding time, exercise and disinfecting regularly once a month with sulphur and sabadilla or pyrethrum as a preventive against lice and other vermin.

CANADIAN BRIEFS

OTTAWA — Hydro-electric construction now under way in Canada amounts to a greater horsepower figure than at any previous time in the history of the Dominion. Power plants actually under construction are planned to produce more than 1,680,000 horsepower, with an ultimate potential capacity of 4,000,000.

TORONTO — The province of Ontario is invited to spend between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000 in the extension and improvement of its charitable and correctional institutions. Recommendations made by a Royal Commission on Public Welfare, submitted to the provincial government and now under consideration, would cost that sum if carried out to the full.

OTTAWA — For the first four months of the present fiscal year, April to July inclusive, immigration to Canada amounted to 58,273 a decrease of 38 per cent from the total of 94,214 shown for the corresponding period of last year. Further restrictions on immigration have been imposed by the new Government and no one now is admitted who is in the least likely to become a charge on the public treasury.

TORONTO — For the first time in their history the courts of Ontario are hearing divorce cases. Parliament having relinquished its jurisdiction over petitions from this province Parliament will continue to handle cases from Quebec province which, being predominantly Roman Catholic, tends to be few.

TORONTO — Ontario's mineral production for the present year is expected to reach a total of about $117,000,000 or about the same as last year. For the first six months the production amounted to $58,236,562 an increase of $2,738,401 over the first half of 1929.

EVERY FARMER MAY HAVE OWN GAS PLANT

From an old strawstack and recently moved weeds, brilliant gas lights, latest model kitchen range gas iron, automatic water heater, room heaters, furnace and refrigerator perform perfectly on the C. M. Strawman ranch in Moccasin, Manitoba as a result of an ingenious device recently built by Mr. Strawman.

It converts a ton of any vegetable waste even sawdust corn stalks or cobs, into 10,000 cubic feet of standard commercial gas, 600 pounds of charcoal and 600 to 1,000 pounds of liquid motor fuel, kerosene, pitch and acid, all of which have many uses on the farm and elsewhere and possess a commercial value potentially greater than the waste itself.

"Straw" or weeds Mr. Strawman has been treating in his plant are burned. They are placed in an airtight cylinder and the gases they are baked by heat, preferably from its own gas, applied from a fire box underneath.

The material shrinks little in volume but in weight it shrinks about two-thirds. The charcoal resembles the original straw except that it is very black and brittle. The other two-thirds passes from the oven or retort through an iron pipe in the form of moist vapor, much like smoke into a condenser where the condensable liquids, tar, oil, kerosene, acid and the like are collected and from which the purified gas passes to a storage tank or gas holder of conventional type.

From the latter an ordinary gas main leads to household appliances in which it performs the same as the gas collected and from which the gas is collected and from which the purified gas passes to a storage tank or gas holder of conventional type.

FALL AND SPRING HINTS ON ANNUAL WEED CONTROL

This year, where the Stinkweed and the Mustard infections have been and the inspectors have, in many cases, been cautioned to weed the owners or renters that, should the infection be not brought under control the following year, the crop will be condemned.

The purpose of this is to stimulate control. Two ways may be used. If the farmer does not consider the infection a war, a summer-fallow next year, he should consider the following control measures, keeping in mind the weather, the blowing conditions and other factors which may necessitate modification.

Disc or cultivate the stubble this fall thus giving the weeds an opportunity to germinate early. Disc or cultivate before freeze-up thus destroying those which have germinated and permitting others to germinate first in the spring. Disc or cultivate before seeding and killing another crop of annual weeds.

Some weeds appear before the grain gets up which may be destroyed by a light stroke of the harrow. Even then there will be considerable weeds in the grain and these can be destroyed by harrowing when the grain is from three inches to four inches high. Don't look back, it may make the grain look "tick" at the time but the increased yields and the weed control obtained makes it a paying proposition.

Such control measures, intelligently carried out should prevent any destruction of the crop on account of the weed infestation.

Fall cultivation is also a paying proposition where the land is to be summer-fallowed the following year. There is also a tendency to neglect the summer-fallow during the harvest which results in the weeds going to seed and a large infestation in the crop the following year. A little forethought and timely work saves considerable trouble and makes for more profitable farming.

Keep the above in mind, friends, and modify it to suit your conditions, thus making for a cleaner country next year. Remember it is much easier to take effective action on a polluted farm when the weeds are well in hand.

P. D. HUXLEY, Field Supervisor, Wainwright

IMPORTANT

The Dominion Fire Commissioner at Ottawa has issued the following warning:

Keep waste paper, packing material, and other rubbish cleaned up, and take it out of the building daily if possible.

Make frequent personal inspection to locate and remove fire dangers.

Use safety matches (scratch on the box) only, and keep supply in metal receptacle.

See that your electric wiring is standard, and be careful in using devices. Turn off current before leaving room.

Be sure that chimneys and smoke pipes are reasonably clean and in repair before starting fires.

Keep gasoline, benzene, kerosene, and other inflammables in safety cans.

If you use tobacco, watch out for lighted pipes, cigars and cigarettes.

Have a fire pull or a chemical extinguisher on each floor.

Some furniture and stove polishes are inflammable. Keep in a cool place and do not use where there is open flame.

Use only reliable make of coal oil stoves and heaters. Do not move or fill when lighted, and keep burners clean.

Keep constantly in mind your personal and community responsibility for any possible fire and property loss by fire. Take a real look at the danger points before retiring for the night.

Locate the nearest fire alarm box and learn how to send in an alarm without delay.

Keep insured in sound companies through a reputable agent, and put in your claim with a clear conscience if accidental fire happens after you have done all you can to make your property safe.

If a fire results from your carelessness you have helped to weaken the resources of your country at a time when every dollar counts.

READ AND HEED

Asbes should be kept in metal receptacles and never in paper or wood on barrels or boxes.

Only rags or waste should be kept in standard metal waste cans and contents removed and burned each night.

Rubbish should never be allowed to accumulate in or near buildings. Gasoline, naphtha and other volatile oils should not be kept in buildings and should be used only with extreme care.

Open fire holes should be protected with sheet iron, or better be bricked up.

Electricity, when improperly installed, is hazardous; lamp cords should not be hung on nails or wrapped around piping; paper shades should never be used. Do not tamper with electrical installations.

Stove pipes should be securely riveted and run directly to brick chimneys and never through floors or partitions protect floors under and above stoves with brick, cement, or sheet metal.

See that all fire extinguishing apparatus is in good working order.

Damp lampblack will spontaneously ignite. Do not stack and pulverized coal and charcoal when wet.

Requiring all doors to swing outward in public buildings, schools, theatres, etc., may prevent the loss of many lives.

Aid in the Prevention of Fire and Loss of Life.

ALBERTA GOVERNMENT ASKS FOR SHARE OF UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

EDMONTON—Some definite plans for the application in Alberta of the federal relief of unemployment are now in course of arrangement between the provincial and federal governments. Premier Brodie has announced that his government is communicating with the minister of labor at Ottawa as to the various avenues of employment that may be worked out jointly with the assistance of the Dominion contribution. This step is being taken in anticipation of the relief scheme bill being ratified by the Senate on Thursday.

Also coming in for serious consideration by the government these days is the condition of agriculture in its various branches, resulting from the low prices for grain and livestock as a result. The provincial department of agriculture has been studying the entire situation in the province for the past two weeks, mapping out the areas where a shortage of feed is likely, with a danger of necessity of sacrificing livestock forage as a result. Areas that have an abundance of feed are also being mapped, and agricultural leaders have been consulted as to the best methods of meeting the situation.

STORING APPLES

It is always cheaper to buy apples by the box, hamper or barrel than it is to buy by the small basket or individual specimen. The reason people refrain from such purchases is because of the difficulty anticipated in keeping the fruit.

If kept in a cool damp place the fall and winter varieties of apples will maintain their fine qualities unimpaired for long periods of time. Experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have a considerable attention to this phase of the apples marketing problem and express the view that the average householder should have little or no difficulty in maintaining an adequate supply of the king of fruits throughout the year.

When an apple is picked from the tree it is still alive and to be kept in good condition it has to be stored under healthy conditions. When left in the kitchen or near a furnace apples will shrivel and dry up, losing much of their fine flavor and quality. The simple expedient of placing them in a cool damp place insures satisfaction over a long period of time.

CAR SCARES HORSE

GIRL RIDER INJURED

What might have had disastrous results took place last Thursday on the Irma highway when Miss Anderson and W. Fisher were riding horse and thinking of returning to Hardisty.

Mr. Elmer Johns, who overtook the above with his car had nearly reached them when the horse which the girl was riding took fright and threw its rider. She landed heavily on the ground and the car sustained considerable bruises.

Dr. Greenberg, of Irma, and Dr. McBride of Hardisty both examined the patient and it is thought that nothing more serious than a few days in the Hardisty hospital will be necessary to restore her to full health, although at first it was thought that some ribs were broken.

What Shall We Name The Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY
CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each new baby that comes into the world is indeed an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

No 26—ARTHUR GUTERMAN

My only favorite name is "Vida," a name, that I wouldn't dare recommend it for many of the newest generation. And Mrs. Guterman is so jealous of her right to that name through family custom and remote Spanish ancestry.

ELLIS is a name of Hebrew origin meaning, "God, the lord." ELLIOT and ELLIOT are derivatives of ELLIS which in turn is a derivative of ELIJAH.

ESMERALDA is a name of Latin origin meaning "Emerald." It is the name of a character in Victor Hugo's "Notre Dame."

CANDY AS A SELF-STARTER

The after effects of long-distance running have been carefully studied by those interested in athletics and dieting.

Several years ago, after the famous Boston Marathon run it was found that the physical exhaustion of the men was in exact proportion to the sugar content of the blood—those with the least sugar content being the most exhausted and vice versa.

The following year, the experiment was made of feeding the same men a large amount of carbohydrates the the run. The runners were directed to eat the candy just before the time when exhaustion sets in during the earlier run, on the theory that candy supplied before exhaustion began would replace the energy which had been used, and that no exhaustion would result.

The conclusion was borne out by the results. None who had been thus fed showed the exhaustion experienced the previous year, and all made better running time. One man who was given the carbohydrate feeding or the candy was the only one who experienced exhaustion.

LIME-FLAVORED DESSERTS

Very often an unusual flavor is the one thing needed to turn an ordinary meal into an extraordinary one. Lime-flavored drinks have been popular for years, but how often do you serve a lime-flavored dessert? Here are two exceptionally delicious ones.

Ocean Crest Bavarian

1 package lime-flavored gelatin
1 pint boiling water
1/2 cup almonds, chopped
12 dates, seeded and finely cut
1/2 cup cream, whipped
12 drops almond extract
12 marshmallows
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Pour 1/2 cup gelatin mixture in thin layer over bottom of individual molds. Chill until firm. Chill remaining 1 1/2 cups of gelatin mixture until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water, and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in almonds, dates, marshmallows, cream and flavoring. Fill molds. A GOOD START

Thirty-two teeth make the biting and grinding machine which sets the food we take into our mouths on its way to digestion. A good start is not everything, but a good start is desirable and helpful.

Thirty-two teeth are at least 64 reasons for giving them attention, because lack of attention leads to poor teeth, which in turn, means that the first step in digestion is interfered with and the food does not get off to a good start.

The crown of the tooth is composed of enamel, the hardest substance in the body. Teeth do not wear out from use. Chewing keeps the gums and teeth healthy. Food that is well-chewed is thus properly prepared for digestion. The thorough chewing of food is good for digestion and good for the teeth.

If the teeth become decayed, pain results, and chewing is avoided, so food is not prepared properly for digestion. Cavities should be promptly filled as early filling saves the teeth.

We should not wait until the teeth become painful or until we can see or feel a cavity, because this means a considerable amount of damage has already been done. Regular visits to the dentist will mean the discovery of the beginnings of cavities. That is the time to treat them so as to prevent any extreme decay.

To have healthy teeth, attention must be given to the diet. Milk and green vegetables, because of their mineral content, are valuable in providing for the building of good teeth. Chew your food thoroughly and so exercise the jaws and stimulate the gums, the health of which is part and parcel of the health of the mouth.

Brush the teeth regularly, upon rising, after each meal and, most important of all the last thing in the day. It is better to brush the teeth after breakfast than before if you are only going to do it once. Never neglect cleaning before going to bed.

Brush so that the bristles are pulled between the teeth away from the gums. After brushing rinse the mouth thoroughly. If dental floss is used great care must be taken not to cut the gums or harm rather than good will result.

Teeth have much to do with general health. The collection of pus in the roots may be a centre for poisoning the whole body. Visit the dentist regularly to prevent decay and also to keep the gums and teeth healthy so that the body will not be harmed. A clean mouth is good health insurance.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By

That all the advantages imaginable cannot make a business great unless its owners realize the importance of continuous advertising and use its service in the development of business.

When a business concern fully realizes the value of advertising, nothing will retard its growth.

Quality, continuously advertised, will supply the business needed by any concern.

The good will of the public is the most valuable asset any business can have. Continuous advertising is a builder of good will.

Business concerns that have a desire to give their customers satisfaction and to meet their every requirement prove that fact by continuous advertising.

Advertising through the printed page is the most pleasing sales service that can be given the public.

Advertising pays in good will and in profits. It tells the public the practical and distinctive features of merchandise, and service.

Advertising is always busy building for business for the concern that utilizes its services.

Advertising is of universal help. It serves everybody every where.

TOWN PLANNING IN THIS PROVINCE

Being a series of short articles explanatory of the provisions of the Alberta Town Planning Act and Regulations thereunder.

By
HORACE L. SEYMOUR

Provincial Director of Town Planning

Article 3

Disposal of Lands other than by Registered Plans

In a previous article the Regulations governing the subdivision of land were discussed.

After the registration of a subdivision there frequently occurred in the past the splitting up of registered lots by description, resulting in lots of too narrow width for desirable home occupation, or in an undesirable change of frontage. In many instances where a subdivision or townsite has been registered, there is also a tendency for the owner of adjoining lands to sell or lease (generally for the purpose of erecting dwellings) lots of from one half acre up, but to do this by description with out survey, and frequently by agreement of sale so that nothing is officially known of the transaction for some time. There has thus often arisen a very undesirable condition with buildings erected without reference to existing subdivision or development and often blocking further desirable development.

Section 43 of the Town Planning Act has been enacted to take care of the above and similar situations. No more than one dwelling is ordinarily legally permitted on any registered parcel (unless used exclusively for agricultural purposes) and new parcels of land cannot be loosely defined by description but only under authoritative approval on behalf of the Provincial Town Planning Board. Just what this legislation may mean to the future advantages of the province can be best realized by consideration of the many difficulties that have arisen where such provisions were not made effective or carried out in the past.

It just will happen even in the best of families

I get my telephone bill on the first of the month. And do I pay it promptly? Well, it's simply become a habit with me for these telephone people have mighty effective means of jolting you out of your lapses of memory. They simply cut off your telephone service. And that's that. And it's the same with the gas and electric light service.

But just let a newspaper publisher cut off a man's news supply because he's lapsed his subscription — and what a howl! It just isn't done, that's all. So a man can get a newspaper supply indefinitely, and Mr. Newspaper Publisher keeps on footing the bill.

But is it fair? No! You can't run a successful business that way. Sooner or later the newspaper which continues sending out copies not paid for will go broke, and so we are forced to stop all unpaid subscriptions after November 1st. We are announcing it thus early, because we know it is hard to get the $2 now, but we ask you to kindly make provision for this account on or before November 1st, as no unpaid subscriptions will be sent out of this office after that date.

SPECIAL ASSISTANCE will be given to any person who has no cash available to pay his subscription but who wants to get the paper. This is an individual matter however and we ask all who desire such assistance to come to the Star Office and let us explain. The point is that in these hard times, we are prepared to see that no one goes without his paper provided he will make the necessary arrangements.

A COLUMN OF WIT & HUMOR

Daddy, why—how began for the tenth time that morning.

'Look here, said the father, have you ever heard the story of the little boy who asked so many questions he turned into a question mark?'

The youngster had not heard of this little boy and pondered deeply on the matter.

'But daddy,' he asked at length, 'how did he manage to keep the dot under himself?'

'What are those square places marked off in white paint in the square?'

'They're safety zones.'

'How's that?'

'Well, if you can stand there and are run over by a motor car, your heels can recover from the driver.'

'State Patrol—Have ye yer permit on ye for driving the car?'

'Motorist—I have that. Are ye wantin' to see it?'

'State Patrol—What for would I be wantin' to see it if ye had it! Its if ye had it not that I'd want to look at it.'

Friend (to rejected one)—Cheer up old boy, there's plenty more fish in the sea.

Rejected One—Yes, but I've used all my bait.

A little girl was explaining how she had hurt her hand some days previously, and said the little girl, 'Yes and it hurts me yet.' Then spreading out her hands and turning to her mother who was sitting beside her.

asked, 'Which hand was it Mummy?'

'Why the black eye, old man?' a notoriously much-married man was asked by a friend.

'Well, you see, said the black-eyed one, 'I came home rather untidy the other night and thought I'd read a little before going to bed. My wife came down and caught me, and there was some pronounced trouble.'

'What were you reading?'

'By ill-luck, I'd chosen the chess board!'

Teacher—Tommie, can you tell me how matches are made?'

Tommie—No, ma'am, but I don't blame you for wanting to know?'

'What on earth do you mean?'

'Mother says you've been trying to make one for years.'

Mistress—Be careful with those books. Several go back to George the Fund.

Maid—Yes mum, and I see several should go back to the library.

'What do you think of the Museum of Art?'

'Oh, the pictures are good enough but there ain't no jokes under them.'

PITY THE POOR TEACHER

Many parents whose children have come home from school with poor marks fail to appreciate how difficult it is for a teacher, no matter how willing she may be, to give very high percentage in all cases.

The Washington Post some time ago gave the following quotations from school examination papers in Baltimore, Maryland. If you were a teacher, how would you mark such answers?

'A blizzard is the inside of a hen.'

A circle is a round, straight line with a hole in the middle.

George Washington married Mary Oatis and in due time became the father of his country.

A mountain range is a large cook stove.

Achilles was dipped in the river Styx to make him immortal.

Pompeii was destroyed by an eruption of saliva from the Volcan.

PHYLLIS IN A FIX

cussable examination of the contents revealed envelopes and cards bearing the name 'R. Weston.'

The fete was a tremendous success. The weather was perfect and practically the whole of Southcliffe rolled up in loyal support of a deserving cause.

Miss Hopzibah however, was having such a busy time in various directions that up to late afternoon, she had found on chance for that little explanation regarding the mysterious book, while Ronnie's job in connection with the competitions kept him tied to the big fields facing the sea where they were taking place.

That young man was in his element. He had flung himself boyishly and wholeheartedly into his job and was the life and soul of the various races and games which he started and directed. And it was only when the competitions were over and the moment for the presentation of the prizes drawing near that he recollected an all-important fact.

The list of prizes for the various winners was in his notebook. But where in blazes was that confounded notebook?

Ronnie searched his pockets vainly and put a hand to his corrugated forehead. He'd had the thing last evening but after that his mind was a blank.

Could he have left it in the tent proceedings where the prizes were laid out?

During a lull in the proceedings, while everyone was joining in the scrum for refreshments, Ronnie hurried off to the tent, which was a little apart from the general scene of hilarity. The man on guard halted him joyously and dashed off to moisten his dry throat. And Ronnie started a strenuous search.

But the pocket book was nowhere to be seen. Where in the name of—At the sound of his name in a loud, voice that carried half a mile, Ronnie jerked around. There grinning at him over the hedge that faced the open flap of the tent, was a scarecrow—a flesh and blood scarecrow and a most disreputable specimen at that.

A battered old cap was stuck anyhow upon his rough shock of red hair. Two days' growth of beard was upon his forehead. And his general outfit was a crying shame against respectability and convention.

Ronnie gaped at the apparition—and advanced, still gaping.

'Bob Dawson! he ejaculated. 'What in the name of all that's disreputable are you doing here?'

'I'm on a tramp tour! my dear old stick, so I thought I'd look you up,' explained the scarecrow with an outsize grin. 'I dropped in at your dig and heard you were boasting some sort of jamboree, so hiked along here I say, Weston.'

'Shut up! Ronnie glanced round apprehensively, then leaped over the hedge, lowering his voice a little. 'Don't call me Weston here!'

'Eh? Why not. What's the game?'

'Oh, just a little joke. 'I'll let you in on it later. But for the love of Mike don't yell so, son. You've a voice like a bally fog-horn. And look here, d'you mind clearing out for now? This is a frightfully respectable crowd, and at the present moment you look as though goal was your natural home.'

The other grinned again. 'Matter of fact, I haven't struck a beauty parlor for two days,' he admitted, moderating his voice a little as requested. 'But I'll take the gentle hint and toddle along for a wash and brush-up. See you later eh?'

The two men exchanged a few more remarks in lowered tones. In the surprise and slight agitation of his friend's appearance, Ronnie had forgotten that the tent containing the prizes had been temporarily left unguarded. And it was owing to sheer carelessness of fate that two things practically happened at the same time.
